DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

Claims 1-12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as containing subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention.

The applicant fails to disclose means in which one could make and/or use the invention in order to get the desired results recited by the applicant in claim 1. The applicant fails to disclose the type of capacitor and/or any other mechanism that would need to be used in order to achieve the type of capacitance that would increase or decrease opposite of the parasitic capacitance at the transistor. Simply saying that the capacitor is a metal insulating metal type capacitor does not disclose whether the capacitor is self-variable, manually variable, or non-variable. Without this information, one skilled in the art would not be sure if the invention is constructed correctly if the results are not achieved. Further it is not possible to use the function of this invention if the structure is not adequately disclosed. One would be subject to undue experimentation in order to construct and verify the construction and use of the claimed invention.

Although no prior art has been applied at this time against the claims, it is not to be interpreted that prior art will not be used in the future if the applicant can overcome the current 112 rejection.
